

SKIPPY WRITES:

Dear CLAWS,

Hi, my name is Skippy, Beverley will know me better as B709.

Last Easter I was on the streets and fending for myself - I found a house with another cat and started jumping through the kitchen window to steal some food. Luckily for me, the owners of this other cat started to feed me too. They checked out if I had an owner but with no response called CLAWS who payed for me to be taken to the vets for my vaccinations and blood tests. Over the months and thanks to the kindness and patience of my new owners I have become more confident, happy and secure (and well fed) in this loving home.

I have learned to play and am no longer scared of their other cat - he was never bothered by me and sometimes I even chase his tail (though I don't think he is too keen on that game). I've had many adventures over the past few months - I can get into mischief sometimes but my owners are always there to give me a reassuring cuddle!

I have just spent my first Christmas in my new home and thought you might like to see that B709 is enjoying a new start in a loving and happy home. Thankyou CLAWS for helping my owners be able to take me on.

Skippy

(and thanks from her owners too, we love our bundle of mischief and can't believe how much she has changed from the tiny, timid cat she was last year, to an inquisitive and mischievous young cat)
